

Saxon Organic Briefing – March 2019

Organic cereal market

Spring drilling conditions have remained favourable, but inadequate rainfall across the UK and Europe is increasingly a concern for the market. Various grades of current crop organic wheat are still adequately supplied despite imported supply chain disruption, and feed compounder sentiment is relaxed. Our current price indication for both organic feed wheat and barley £275 ex farm, May/June collection buyers call. There is limited demand for full loads of organic feed oats now indicated £260 ex farm, May collection – a good opportunity to market oats that didn't achieve milling spec. New crop organic cereals are still unquoted.

Organic premium cereals

All premium markets are quiet, with buyers reportedly well covered until harvest. Long-holders should resample stocks and send them to the Saxon lab, so that we can capture any remaining premiums, if opportunities arise – contact us for samples bags and freepost labels. Following values are strictly indications only, all current crop for June collection: org milling oats - £320 ex, org milling wheat (11% pro) - £310 ex, org malting barley - £300 ex.

Organic proteins

Stocks of protein expellers are still low, but protein demand is easing with grass now growing well across much of the country - although rainfall is very much needed. Again, feed compounders reportedly have good protein cover across the board. Imported organic pulses are in good supply, with cargoes of EU origin peas still offered into the UK market. At this time it appears unlikely current crop values will find much support - organic feed beans are now indicated £370 ex farm. Contact us for more details.

We advise all sellers of organic grains to contact us with estimated cropping. Simon and Alastair are in daily communication with the UK's independent consumers and major compounders and offer the best opportunities to market your grain throughout the year.
